Check what you can claim for jury service

You do not get paid for doing jury service but you can claim some money back towards loss of earnings, childcare, travel, and food and drink costs. See the rates below.

You can also get a personalised result by using the calculator at www.gov.uk/check-juror-claims.

Loss of earnings and extra childcare or care costs

We can reimburse you a single maximum daily amount to cover both:

- loss of earnings
- additional care costs due to jury service

Days of jury service	Hours at court each day	Total you can claim per day for loss of earnings and care costs
First 10 days	More than 4 hours	£64.95
	4 hours or less	£32.47
11 days and more	More than 4 hours	£129.91
	4 hours or less	£64.95

You cannot claim for weekends or bank holidays, as the court is closed.

Travel costs

How much you can claim depends on how you travel to court.

How you travel to court	The court will reimburse
Public transport	Cost of the ticket (standard return fare)
Bicycle	9.6p per mile
Motorcycle	31.4p per mile
Car	31.4p per mile - check if the court will pay for parking
Car – with one other juror as a passenger	35.6p per mile
Car – for each extra juror as a passenger	3.2p per mile
Taxi	The fare – ask the court for permission before using a taxi

You must check with your jury manager at the court that you can claim for parking before you pay for it.

Food and drink costs

You can claim these amounts even if you bring your own food and drink.

Hours at court each day	What you can claim per day
Up to and including 10 hours	£5.71
Over 10 hours	£12.17

Loss of earnings

You can claim for loss of earnings if you're either:

- employed and your employer will not pay you during jury service
- self-employed or a paid company director

The maximum rates you can claim are shown overleaf. You cannot claim more if your full pay is higher than these rates.

If you work part time

You can only claim for days you normally work, even if you spend a full week in court.

For example, if you normally work 3 days a week, you can only claim loss of earnings for those 3 days, as you've not lost earnings on the other 2 days.

Childcare or care costs

You cannot claim for care costs you normally have, for example as part of your usual working week. But if you'll have additional care costs that are only due to jury service, you can claim some money towards these.

You must be within the combined maximum daily allowance for loss of earnings and caring costs. For example, if you're claiming £64.95 for extra care costs, you'll have used up all this allowance and cannot claim any more on top for loss of earnings.

If you claim benefits

Your benefits will not be affected for at least 8 weeks, as long as you tell your benefits officer or work coach about your jury service. If you're asked to serve on a longer trial, when you arrive at court, you'll need to speak with the jury manager to find out how your benefits will be affected.

Travel tickets

Only buy daily travel tickets unless the court tells you otherwise when you start jury service. Keep copies of your tickets or receipts, to submit with your claim. If you do not keep these, we may not be able to pay you back.

When to claim

Submit your claim at the end of jury service. You'll usually be paid 7 to 10 working days after submitting your claim form. The court may be able to pay your expenses during the trial if it's likely to last a long time or if you're facing financial hardship. Check with the jury manager at your court when you start.
